The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and the Government of Madagascar will bring policy makers and development practitioners together, 10-13 November 2015, in Carlton Hotel, Anosy Antananarivo, Madagascar, to discuss innovative approaches to transforming poor rural communities.

During the four-day workshop participants will review the implementation of IFAD-funded projects and programmes in East and Southern Africa, share development-related experiences and lessons learnt, identify challenges faced during implementation of rural development interventions and pave the way to further advance rural development and agriculture-related activities.
